Problem We Are Trying to Solve

Schweizer Tafel's work makes an important contribution toward the alleviation of poverty in Switzerland. Every day, the charity collects around 16 tons of surplus groceries in perfect condition from retailers and distributes the items to around 450 charitable institutions to benefit people in need. According to the Swiss Federal Statistical Office, there are around 650,000 people living at or below subsistence level in Switzerland. That is 7.5 percent, and unfortunately, this figure is trending upwards. One of the aims of the UN 2030 Agenda is to eradicate poverty worldwide. And we here in Switzerland are not exempt from this challenge.

How We Are Going To Do It

The recipe for Soup Day is simple: There will be lots of cooks wielding their wooden spoons at various venues where you can try their soup and make a donation. Credit Suisse is organizing Soup Day at eight public locations and in seven of the bank's own staff restaurants.

If, on Soup Day, you are not in the office, cannot be at one of the locations or simply don't have time to enjoy a bowl of soup, you can support Schweizer Tafel by making a donation online.
